DETAILED ACTION

1. The amendment filed on February 6, 2003 has been entered. Claims 1-10 and 13-14 are pending. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-10 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-10, and 13-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Shinichi et al. (JP 2000-058312) in view of Ishihara et al. (JP 11-251131) and Ohashi et al. (EP 0 430 198 A2).

Shinichi et al. discloses a composition for a resin bonded magnet constituted of an alloy powder such as Nd-Fe-B (page 2, ¶ 13) coated on its surface with a phosphate film comprising two or more phosphates including iron phosphate (page 2, ¶ 14). A zinc film can also be coated as a processing agent onto the magnetic powder (page 2, ¶ 14). Shinichi et al. does not specifically disclose the thickness of the phosphate film. However, Ishihara et al. discloses a similar magnetic powder that can be coated with a phosphate film having a thickness of 10-100 nm (abstract). One skilled in the art would have found it obvious to adjust the thickness of the phosphate layer to between 10-100 nm. One skilled in the art would also have found it obvious to adjust Fe/rare earth element ratio to within the claimed ranges. The motivation for doing so would have been to optimize the magnetic properties of the powder. Shinichi et al. does not specifically disclose that the apparent density of the compacted magnetic powder should be 85% or more. However, Ohashi et al. discloses a similar magnet which comprises a crushed magnetic powder having an apparent density of at least 95% of the intrinsic density (abstract). One skilled in the art would have found it obvious to adjust the apparent density of the magnet of Shinichi et al. to greater than 95%. The motivation for doing so would have been to optimize the weight and magnetic properties.
